

Air New Zealand Recognised in Condé Nast Awards

Air New Zealand has been given another top accolade in a prestigious travel awards.

The national carrier was voted second best long-haul leisure airline by Condé Nast Traveller magazine, placing it alongside New Zealand's ranking as second best destination in the world.

"This recognition by readers of one of the world's top magazines is a further reflection that the dedication and hard work of Air New Zealanders to deliver a uniquely kiwi experience is resonating around the globe," say Group General Manager International Airline Ed Sims.

The award follows on from Air New Zealand's most recent accolade - the Preservation Award in the Condé Nast 2009 World Saver Awards for leading the way in exploring alternate fuel sources.
